Token Swap

We have officially moved into Autumn, and with that, we see the seasons changing and as well as Winding Tree's very own Lif token. We have recently upgraded the Lif token to a more robust and future-proofed version of Lif. If you are the owner of some Lif, you will need to swap it here. To understand some of the reasons for the token swap, you can read this post. If you need any help with the swap, please join our Telegram group to get a hand.

From Phocuswire

Our advisor Eric Leopold had a lot to say in a recent opinion piece published in PhocusWire.

Why Business Travellers Will Care About personalised Air Travel

“What if the corporate and the airline agree on the terms of health, sustainability, and care, but cannot implement it, for technical and commercial reasons related to intermediaries?

If we were to invent and build from scratch a marketplace today, to connect corporates with travel suppliers, what would it look like? Forget all you know, unlearn the legacy, just imagine what’s really needed to make it work.

This marketplace is open to all and completely transparent, without hidden fees or else. This is called “open-source software.

The agreements between corporates and travel suppliers, as well as each booking, or order, are coded into secure and shared databases, and can be executed automatically, without the need for an intermediary. This is called “smart contracts.” Highlights Eric.

These sentiments mirror what we believe in at Winding Tree. Do you agree with the notion that travelers have gone through a mindset shift? Get in touch, and let’s continue the conversation.

From USA Today

Yes, you can book travel with bitcoin and other cryptocurrency — but should you?

We are delighted to have had the opportunity to contribute to a recent article, The News-Press Media Group (Part of the USA TODAY Network), on the possibilities and obstacles of using cryptocurrencies to book travel. It is happening, but as our co-founder Pedro Renaud Anderson says, we have a way to make it easier for the traveler.

Pedro's point is that he's far from convinced that paying with crypto will solve the real issues for the industry. Just booking with crypto solves zero problems. The main focus should be solving the current distribution issue in the travel sector. Accepting bitcoin for travel is not an innovation. It's a marketing move.

From Money of the Future Conference

On September 25Th, co-founder Pedro Renaud Anderson spoke at the Money of the future conference in Ukraine. He spoke alongside a fine lineup of crypto and blockchain technology experts and caught up with various partners.

From Nasdaq

Know Your Customer

Proud to be featured in Nasdaq. Our co-founder Pedro Renaud Anderson highlights the need to dig deep and know your customers.

Says Pedro:

“ To adhere to the inherently free-spirited approach of crypto, signing up with the system can and should be optional. This approach could be fused with real-world verification systems, such as formal ID documents issued by state governments and business registries. Legal documents reviewed by a trusted third party could be the first pipeline laid down towards a scalable KYC solution. A system incorporating enough trusted verification entities will be able to function without a central body, instead powered on the same decentralized consensus as to the blockchain.”

Winding Tree is part of this focus. We are part of the change. We are ready to disrupt safely.
